

The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

Parliamentary monarchy

Часть=2.

The House of Lords, 1808-1811

The House of Lords doesn't have now as much power in the country, as it used to.

An important vote: the House of Lords voting for the Parliament Act, 1911.

Under the Parliament Act 1911, the Lords' power to reject most legislative bills was reduced to a delaying power.

Governments in recent years have used the Upper House as a variant of the Select Committee process to finalize legislation before presentation for Royal Assent.

Lord Chancellor, the presiding officer
(Speaker) of the House of Lords. (19th century)

For several centuries
Lord Chancellor used to be the presiding officer (Speaker) of the House of Lords.

In May 2006, the position of Speaker in the House of Lords was separated from the office of Lord Chancellor as part of the reforms under the Constitutional Reform Act 2005.

Baroness Helene Valerie Hayman, Lord Speaker of the House of Lords in Parliament of the United Kingdom.

Baroness Helene Valerie Hayman was one of nine candidates for the new role of Lord Speaker. In July 2006 she became the first ever Lord Speaker. The Lord Speaker is to resign party membership and outside interests to concentrate on being an impartial presiding officer.

Baroness Helen Hayman (left) with Russian First Lady Svetlana Medvedeva (right) in London, April 1, 2009

The Lord Speaker and other Members of the Lords represent the House of Lords at a range of events, sharing their expertise to broaden understanding about the House.

Members of the Lords play a vital role in keeping an eye on the decisions and actions of the Government.

The House of Lords Library

Bringing years of knowledge, they apply an experienced perspective to examining legislation and public policy.

Big Ben and The House Of Commons

In the left wing of the building, closer to Big Ben the House of Commons meets.

The House Of Commons Chamber

The House of Commons, the lower Chamber of Parliament, is a democratically elected body, consisting of 650 Members of Parliament (MPs), who are elected.

Electoral Map of Britain

The UK is split into constituencies, and each constituency votes for an MP (Member of Parliament) to represent them.

The House of Commons at the beginning of the 19th century

The full, formal style and title of the House of Commons is The Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland in Parliament assembled.

The Speaker presides over debates in the British House of Commons, 1834

The House of Commons was originally far less powerful than the House of Lords, but today its legislative powers greatly exceed those of the Lords.

The main functions of the House are: to originate laws; to provide (by voting) taxation; to scrutinize government policy and administration; to debate the major issues of the day.

House of Commons Chamber: Speaker's table

The Speaker of the House of Commons is the chief officer and highest authority of the House of Commons.

House of Commons speaker, 1955

The holder of this office is an MP who has been elected to be Speaker by other Members of Parliament.

The former Britain's Speaker of the House of Commons, Michael Martin, speaking to the House of Commons

The Speaker chairs debates in the Commons chamber.
During debates he keeps order and calls MPs to speak.
He must remain politically impartial at all times.

John Bercow current Speaker of the House of Commons

The current Speaker of the House of Commons
John Bercow was elected on 22 June 2009.

John Bercow - current Speaker of the House of Commons

He was returned as a MP in the 2010
general election and was re-elected as Speaker when the House sat at the start of the new Parliament on May 18, 2010.

The Mace in the House of Commons has become the symbol of privileges and authority of the House.

Paul Rainer, Oliver Cromwell in the House of Commons in 1653.

In medieval times, maces were weapons of war. For many centuries a mace has been a staff of office in Parliament.

The Sergeant at Arms, Jill Pay, places the mace on the Table to signal that the House is sitting. May 18, 2010

The mace is carried in and out of the Commons and Lords Chambers in a procession by the Serjeant at Arms at the beginning and end of each day.

© 2000 Library of Parliament
© 2000 Bibliothèque du Parlement

Without the mace in position, the House cannot sit and debate.

Each MP is a member of one of the political parties, or an independent candidate. They hold their seats until Parliament is dissolved (a maximum of five years after the preceding election). At the end of the term the Queen dissolves the Parliament, which is also a traditional procedure.

Dissolution of British Parliament Procedure announced by the Prime Minister Tony Blair