

Oscar Wilde's

The Canterville Ghost

Being scary isn't what it used to be.

Ambassador (n)

If metal objects clank, they make a low noise when they hit each other

Haunt (v)

the main official sent by the government of country to represent it in another country

Clank (n)

If a ghost haunts a place, it appears there often

Strike (v irr)

two metal rings that are joined by a chain and are put on a prisoner's wrists

Match (n)

to light a match in order to produce fire

Dressing case

a thick liquid used for making parts move easily

Handcuffs

a thin, wooden stick that produces a flame when you rub one end of it against a rough surface

Rusty chains

a small piece of luggage for carrying brushes and bottles and toilet articles while traveling

Oiling

a line of metal rings connected together with an orange substance