

Christmas in England

Christmas - a holiday that in many countries has generated a lot of character and tradition. This includes even his date. Initially, the Eastern Christian church established the celebration of Christmas on January 6. However, the Roman Church intentionally moved it to December 25th - the day of pagan festival invincible sun. And the new date was to symbolize the victory of Christianity over paganism. Sixth, the same January to the Western tradition - is the day of Epiphany, or Epiphany, often called the English Twelfth Night.
