What the Welsh Like to Eat

- The symbol of the local cuisine is a leek. However, no less specific look and such dishes as bread from red al gae (a mixture of seaweed, oatmeal and bacon, served as a toast), Welsh rarebit (cheese on toast with added flavor of mustard and beer) and Glamorgan sausages of cheese, bread, herbs and, of course, leeks.

- Welsh children like to play rugby, football, and netball. On weekends and school vacations they hike or ride horses along the coast.

Welsh Culture

- Welsh people have special celebrations around the Christmas season. They get up between 3 and 6 AM to go to church services. Many families spend the entire night of Christmas eve decorating the house and singing and dancing until it is time to go to church. They go wassailing which means going out drinking and singing and carrying the wassail bowl to friends and neighbors. The wassail bowl contains cakes, baked apples and sugar with warm beer and spices poured over it
