

American schools

The American system of school education differs from the systems in other countries. There are state public schools, private elementary schools and private secondary schools. Public schools are free and private schools are fee-paying.

A large, multi-story red brick building with a classical portico supported by columns. A green cupola sits atop the roof. The building is surrounded by bare trees and a snow-covered lawn. A black metal fence runs along the foreground. The text "Public school" is overlaid in the center.
