One of the earliest motion-picture machines was Kinetoscope invented by Thomas A. Edison and W. Dickson.

It was a cabinet showing unenlarged black-and-white films running about 90 seconds. An individual watched through a peephole as the film moved on spools.

Kinetoscope parlours opened in several cities.

However, they were soon replaced by projection machines that threw greatly enlarged pictures on a screen.

These new machines allowed many people to watch one film at the same time.

In the mid-1910-s the first new theatres opened in the USA and Europe. They were called “dream palaces” because of the fantastic luxury of their interiors.

LUMIERE BROTHERS

were inventors who invented the first film projector and motion camera in 1895.

That year on the 28th of December they demonstrated the first three minutes film “Arrival of the train”.

In that film, a train came towards the camera. People ran out of the cinema, thinking it was a real train.

Do you know who made the first film?

What was it about?

ARRIVAL OF A TRAIN AT LA CIOTAT

But Chaplin did most of his work in the United States His “little man” was a tramp with a small black moustache and bowler hat ,who walked with the backs of his feet together .

By 1916, Charlie Chaplin had what was probably the best-known face in the world.

The public transformed him from a star into a mythic figure. Cartoons, poems and comic strips under the Chaplin name appeared in newspapers.

Chaplin

dolls, toys and boots were manufactured. This little man made the whole world laugh with his films.

Like many silent film stars, he didn't succeed in "talkies".

In 1911, the first studio was opened in Hollywood, Los Angeles.

It became the Film-making capital of the world.

By the 1920s, 80 percent of world films were Produced in Hollywood.

Marilyn Monroe was a perfect example of a Hollywood studio star. Her great beauty made her a world-famous sex symbol. But in spite of her success in films, Monroe had a tragic life. She died at the age of 36 from an overdose of sleeping pills. Since her death she has become one of the most written-about film stars in history.

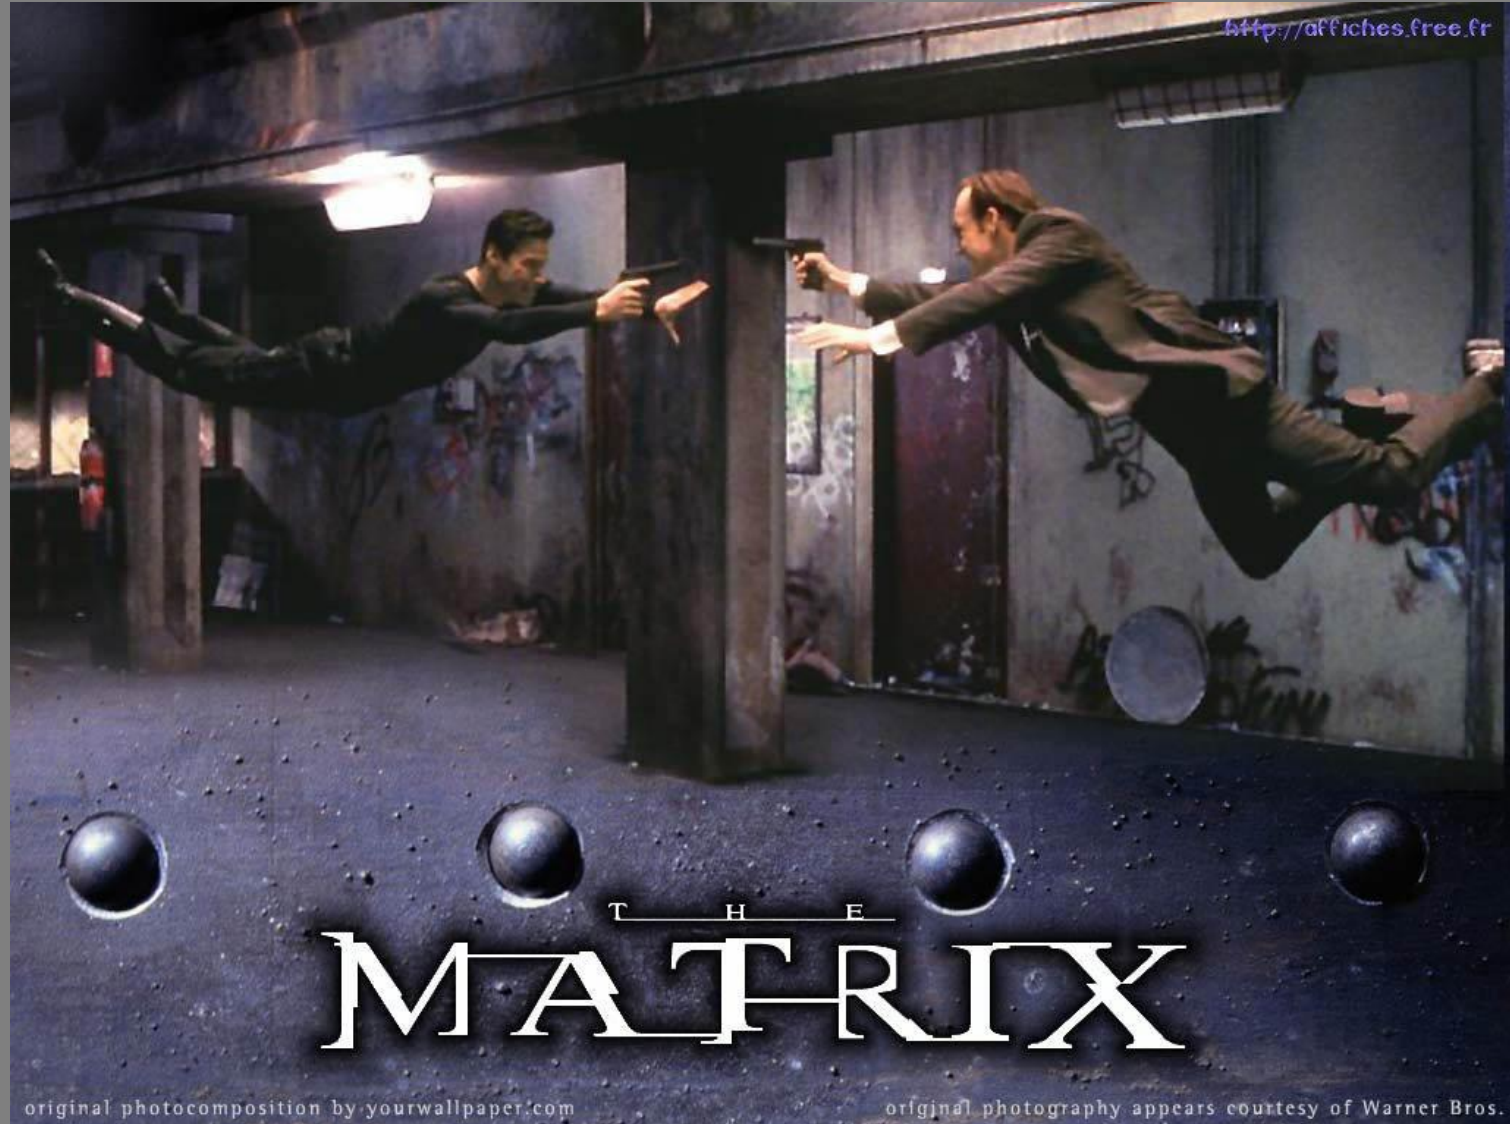

The twentieth century may be called the century of film making. Cinema plays an important role in the life of any society. It is an available popular form of art. Lots of people find going to the cinema one of the best ways of spending their leisure time. But not everyone knows when and how cinematography appeared.

Color was used in only a minority of films until the 1950s; color movies had become the standard by the 1960s.

Popular blockbuster films, enhanced by computer graphic imagery, continued to attain unprecedented worldwide attention. At the same time, films of artistic and cultural interest from throughout the world are available.
