The story of the British flag began in 1603

The Union between England and Scotland and served as the basis for the new flag of the two allied States

The first time the flag was used
only at sea, both military and
merchant ships of both countries

Since 1634 it was decided to use it only on military vessels
as a Jack.

The adoption of the Act of Union in 1707 merged the two kingdoms into a single Kingdom of great Britain and the Union Jack became the flag of the new state

Now in Wales comes a proposal to place a flag with a red dragon
