The skill and creativity shown by the weavers come from years of practice. Most weavers work on their rigs at home, while also tending to the daily chores of cooking, child care, going to the store, and herding sheep. The weavers have each worked about forty hours a week and are just on their way to demonstrating their craft. The rigs they make are well known as "Hualapai Trading Post". All these weavers are well known for their excellent weaving skills and have won awards in commercial and rug shows.

Although many Navajos speak both Navajo and English, these weavers speak Navajo and very little English. Please direct your questions to the information desk clerk, the ranger on duty, or to the interpretive staff. If you are interested in purchasing one of these rigs or ordering another, contact the trader at Hualapai Trading Post.

THE WEAVING
The Hualapai people of the Hualapai Reservation in Arizona are the last of the Navajo people to remain in the area. They are the only people who still weave on the traditional Navajo loom. The Hualapai people are known for their excellent weaving skills and have won awards in commercial and rug shows.
