

A detailed still life painting depicting a traditional tea ceremony. The central focus is a large, ornate brass samovar with multiple tiers and a spout. To its left, a single candle sits in a brass candlestick. In the foreground, a small white teacup with a gold rim rests on a matching saucer. To the right of the cup, a small wooden bowl contains several round, golden-brown pastries. A dark blue cloth with a red floral pattern is draped over the right side of the scene. The background consists of a rustic wooden wall. The overall lighting is warm and focused, creating a sense of intimacy and tradition.
